

William (Bill) Fisher – Profile for GNE President

William (Bill) was born and grew up in a small village in southwest Scotland. He studied geology at Glasgow University and has spent his career working for oil and gas companies, including BP and Shell. Although a petroleum geologist by profession, more recently he has worked as an economist and planner.

He has a wide range of interests including cycling, walking, theatre, opera, early music, history and reading. He also does voluntary work for the photographic database project of the Commonwealth War Graves Commission and also for Dunea, (the water company - helping manage the dune landscape near The Hague).

William has lived in The Hague for some 14 years and very much enjoys being in the Netherlands.

He has two adult daughters, who live in the London area.
